CASES

Wisconsin Supreme Court

County of Grant v. Vogt, 2014 WI 76, 356 Wis.2d
343, 850 N.W.2d 253. 4

STATUTES

Wis. Stat. §346.935(3). 3

ARGUMENT

Contrary to City's argument, the issue is not whether there was an open can in the vehicle, but rather whether Officer Behagen possessed the requisite level of suspicion to believe that Mr. Wille violated Wis. Stat. §346.935(3).

Having an open can in a vehicle is not a traffic law violation. To establish a violation of the open intoxicant law under Wis. Stat. §346.935(3), there must be evidence that the bottle or receptacle contained alcoholic beverages or the seal had been broken or the contents of the receptacle had been partially removed or released. An empty, but opened, can would not justify a charge. (When Behagen contacted Mr. Wille, he observed empty beer cans at Mr. Wille's feet.). Specifically, here, the record does not establish sufficient specific, articulable facts necessary for a violation of Wis. Stat. §346.935(3). Furthermore, there were no reports of any potential indicia of impairment (poor driving, slurred speech, odor, etc.) which suggested that Mr. Wille might have been operating his vehicle while impaired. The citizen caller made no reference to any other fact that suggested potential impairment. Thus, Behagen would not have been justified in stopping Mr. Wille based on a suspicion that he was operating a motor vehicle while impaired. Behagen had nothing more than a hunch here. A savvy hunch is not equivalent to the requisite level of suspicion that would have justified a Terry type temporary detention. County of Grant v. Vogt, 2014 WI 76, at ¶29, 356 Wis.2d 343, 850 N.W.2d 253 .

Because of the above, Officer Behagen did not have the requisite level of suspicion to believe that Mr. Wille was violating the open intoxicant law.

CONCLUSION

The Court should vacate the Judgment of Conviction and reverse the lower's court's ruling denying Mr. Wille's motion for suppression of evidence.
